He said they were.

Asked if ' was true that in some cases janitors were not licensed to attend to the boilers. They first go to Police Headquarters and show by regular examination that they are qualified to run the boilers. Then they are examined again, as an extra precaution, by Mr. Sinyder, the Superintendent of Buildings, as to their qualifications before their appointment is confirmed. They are all licensed in the south switch at the south switch at and capable engineers, every one of them.'
